STAR-BULLETIN GARDEN CONTEST HIGHLY PRAISED

Gave Impetus to Local Food Production, Says Report of Experiment Station

That interest in all branches of feeproduction during the year was give-"an important impetus by the school garden and home garden contests conducted by the Honolulu Star-Bulletin," earlier in the year, is the statement of J. E. Higgins in his annual report to Washington, which is being published in the annual report of the United States experiment station.

"These contests had a very marked influence in stimulating interest in the production of vegetables, not only in the school gardens and in the yards surrounding the homes of the children but in many cases the children con ducted gardens nearly a mile away from their homes, traveling back and forth on foot to keep their growing crops in good condition," writes Mr.

"The influence extended to other children at school as a result of the presence of some successful pupil's garden in the vicinity.

"All this work was a fitting preparation for the emergency food campaign. which started vigorously in the latter part of the third quarter of the year and continues at the time of the pres ent writing. Happening to touch there a silver half-dollar, an almost forgotten incident of bygone days occurred to him, and, through the telling, became the signal for the greatest burst of enthusiasm and the largest contribution for the Red Cross that has so far occurred in these islands. During the civil war, an organiza tion corresponding to the Red Cross and called the "Sanitary Commission" existed. Branch organizations and meetings were called all over the country for the purpose of raising funds to assist in sustaining the work of the commission. There was no coined money in circulation at that time; in fact, owing to the stringency of affairs, coin was scarcely ever seen. ## SUITS UNPOPULAR

Observers on the beach are commenting of late that nowadays you seldom see a man with a rented bathing suit while previously few men owned their own bathing clothes. The local stores are finding the bathing suit business brisk. The Hub, for instance, at 78 South King street, oppesite the Union Grill, make a specialty of $2.50 and $3.50 bathing suits, all wool and guaranteed fast in any of four colors. They opened a shipment this week, and for the present have a full complement of sizes. Try one of the Hub's $2.50 or $3.50 bathing suits.
